

Green Collar Award

NCFE Certificates in Sustainable Development & Developing Enterprise Capabilities.

The Green Collar Award delivers two national qualifications as one integrated training package. Both the Certificate in Sustainable Development and the Certificate in Developing Enterprise Capabilities are level 2 qualifications on the National Qualifications Database. Together, they can be used to train staff to understand the implications of environmental issues in the workplace and to develop the approach to work employers need not only for staff to cope with change but to participate in it by contributing positively to new 'green' processes and procedures. Focusing on the use of environmental project work to develop enterprising staff, this is a unique training opportunity and it is immensely flexible; our green practitioners will work with your staff to contextualise the delivery of the training to the needs of your organisation. Your staff will train by carrying out your/their environmental projects with measurable outcomes.

How the programme is delivered

We will help you to plan projects that can deliver measurable outcomes for your company in, for example:

- Energy management
- Resource-use management
- Environmental procurement
- Waste minimisation
- Supply-chain greening
- Carbon footprint reduction

- Compliance with legislation
- Improving environmental credentials

We'll also help your staff with their understanding of the importance of environmental issues. We'll work with them to develop new ways of thinking and new approaches to work so that they can apply their new learning in the workplace.

Delivery is very learner-centred so that your staff are developing their skills as they work on their projects. Their involvement in company projects means that they're open to change and part of your company's green organisational culture.
